Snowdrops in the Snow

As the snow melted in the forest yesterday and the white buds of the snow drops became visible I was reminded of the changing of the seasons and how we are now on the journey to spring. This has been replicated in school with how the children are now starting to revisit skills that were taught last term and turning those shoots of knowledge into blossoming flowers. It has also been great seeing so many classes using our forest area for their learning and how they are inspired by being outside. Have a lovely weekend and we'll see you on Monday.
